The Himalayan Kingdom

Why visit Nepal?

- ❖ The eternal beauty of its celestial Himalayan peaks and the numerous trekking opportunities.
- ❖ The Kathmandu Valley and its stunning Newar architecture monuments (listed as UNESCO World Heritage Sites).
- ❖ The peaceful atmosphere of its small villages.
- ❖ Its national parks and wild animals, including the Asian rhinoceros.
- ❖ Its religious diversity, temples, monasteries, and ancient culture.
- ❖ The impressive diversity of its landscapes, thanks to its staggering geographic diversity.

Kumari..

The Kumari, incarnation of the goddess Durga, is a living goddess tradition dating back to the 17th century in Nepal. Selected at the age of 4, she must meet 32 criteria, such as: A line under the sole of the foot in a circle. Proportionate heels. Cheeks like a lion. A beautiful golden shadow. Straight, black hair turned to the right, ...

Their feet must not touch the outside ground of the house. Rare official outings punctuate their lives, and the one in Kathmandu makes a bi-daily appearance at the window so that the faithful can benefit from her divine presence.

Adorned in red and makeup highlighting the third eye, the seat of knowledge and the location of the pineal gland, symbolically considered the seat of the soul in many cultures.

At the first drop of blood shed, usually at their first menstruation, they are deposed and replaced, and resume a normal life (for some, readjustment can be quite difficult).

Weather

October to April is considered the best times of the year. The monsoon will have just ended, and clear skies with optimal temperature will prevail. The main festivals of Dashain and Tihar (Hindu equivalent of Christmas in terms of festivity) fall during Oct- Nov. From mid-June to early Oct, it's the monsoon, during which time it rains almost everyday and most of the Himalayas are hidden behind the clouds.
